Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1-6 are allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: The instantly claimed invention is allowable over the cited prior art, because the cited prior art fails to disclose a stripping process for removing flue gas carried by a regenerated catalyst, wherein the regenerated catalyst is passed into the stripper from the upper part and introducing steam and the steam rapidly replacing the flue gas carried by the regenerated catalyst, the removed gas and the excessive steam being collected under a set of inner annular baffles and entering a degassing pipe through the opening part of the degassing pipe. Furthermore, the process is directed towards a specific stripper configuration.

Owen (US Patent 4,973,452) discloses a fluid catalytic cracking process and apparatus, which includes a high temperature stripper, followed by a spent catalyst, followed by a catalyst cooling to control the regeneration inlet temperature. The regenerator and the stripper are independently operated at their respective desired temperatures. However, Owen does not disclose a stripping process for removing flue gas carried by a regenerated catalyst, wherein the regenerated catalyst is passed into the stripper from the upper part and introducing steam and the steam rapidly replacing the flue gas carried by the regenerated catalyst, the removed gas and the excessive steam being collected under a set of inner annular baffles and entering a degassing pipe through the opening part of the degassing pipe. Furthermore, Owen does not disclose the specific stripper configuration.

Haddad et al. (US Patent 4,629,552) discloses a FCC catalyst separation method, which redirects catalyst particles and gas suspension movement towards a separator inlet. The catalyst deflector can be combined with one or more of a short contact time stripper, a stripper mount in or adjacent the exhaust barrel of a separator, and/or catalyst seal pot. However, Haddad et al. does not disclose a stripping process for removing flue gas carried by a regenerated catalyst, wherein the regenerated catalyst is passed into the stripper from the upper part and introducing steam and the steam rapidly replacing the flue gas carried by the regenerated catalyst, the removed gas and the excessive steam being collected under a set of inner annular baffles and entering a degassing pipe through the opening part of the degassing pipe. Furthermore, Haddad et al. does not disclose the specific stripper configuration as instantly claimed.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."

Conclusion
